SEL for Parents

"Research has overwhelmingly demonstrated that parent engagement in a child's education and school community has a positive effects on students' achievement. This positive relationship exists regardless of race, ethnicity, parents' level of education, or socio-economic status. Specifically, parent and family engagement improves attitude and behaviors, attendance and overall mental health alongside academic achievement. The benefits don't stop with the students, parent and family engagement positively impacts teachers and parents as well. As parents demonstrate active engagement and support, teacher's morale improves as does the overall school climate. Parents and families will develop increased confidence and may become more interested in their personal education."
